Argentina: Finding its white wine mojo

Argentina is widely esteemed for its reds, but the 5th wine producer in the world and leading wine producer in South America also has much to offer in the realm of whites. In the last few years, white wines in Argentina have been produced with a distinctive character and are gaining worldwide recognition, with a new focus on quality, and an increasing range of grape varieties. An inexhaustible range of original whites contribute to reinforce Argentina's diversity.

Phil Crozier proposes a journey to discover what's making possible a new era.
